

XM radio is a service which is subscribed to much like satellite TV. If we choose to listen to weather, or traffic reports on this channel it should be our rights under the first amendment. We listen to XM 80% of the time now, and rarely listen to advertising plagued local fm stations. A right which we pay for much like cable television.

The Assoc. of Broadcasters has no right to regulate the dissemination of information, or choices of programming on this media.

Gary Gould